

YAHOO MAIL DOWN IN US, USERS CAN'T SEND EMAIL

It seems that Yahoo Mail is down in certain parts of the United States and users can't send email, according to server status reports from Product Reviews readers. Confirmation of problems also arrived from outage websites and tweets being left every few seconds at the time of writing.

It's not the first time that Yahoo Mail has had problems this month, but hopefully it will be the last. This one is the worst that we've seen for quite some time though, as a Yahoo Mail service which doesn't let you actually send an email is a fatal one in our book.

Head to this link here to see that it's not just us having problems. Yahoo Mail down on June 23 seems to be affecting not only those in the US but also other regions around the world too.

Perhaps the biggest problem is a lack of communication. A company as big as Yahoo should have their team on standby ready to report issues the minute they happen.

However, the official Yahoo Mail Team support is yet to acknowledge the issue and there has been no updates as of yet for affected users.

Is Yahoo Mail not working for you at the moment in your area?

Let us know your problems and if they include Yahoo Mail emails not sending or being forwarded.
