Update: Apple says all is good.

It was less than an hour ago that we told you about a newly-discovered bug within iOS that could potentially delete your iWork files. But now, according to a variety of internet reports, Apple's month of misadventure continues as iCloud is currently experiencing an outage of some kind. Most notably, it seems as if many are being prompted over and over to enter their iCloud credentials within iOS. Apple has acknowledged the outage on its system status page:

System Status as of 6:42 PM CDT

App Store	iCloud Account & Sign In Service may be unavailable for some users.	iOS Device Activation
Apple ID	iCloud Backup Service may be unavailable for some users.	iTunes in the Cloud
Apple Online Store	iCloud Bookmarks & Tabs Service may be unavailable for some users.	iTunes Match
Apple TV	iCloud Calendar Service may be unavailable for some users.	iTunes Radio
Back to My Mac	iCloud Contacts Service may be unavailable for some users.	iTunes Store
Beats Music	iCloud Drive Service may be unavailable for some users.	iWork for iCloud beta
Dictation	iCloud Keychain Service may be unavailable for some users.	Mac App Store
Documents in the Cloud	iCloud Mail Service may be unavailable for some users.	Maps
FaceTime	iCloud Notes Service may be unavailable for some users.	Photo Print Products
Find My Friends	iCloud Reminders Service may be unavailable for some users.	Photos
Find My iPhone, iPad, iPod touch, and Mac	iCloud Storage Upgrades Service may be unavailable for some users.	Siri
Game Center	iCloud Web Apps (iCloud.com) Service may be unavailable for some users.	Spotlight suggestions
iBooks Store	iMessage
iChat	iMovie Theater

It seems as if the outage is widespread and confined to some unknown specific subset of users. While some are reporting that the service is working perfectly fine (myself included), it appears as if all of iCloud across iOS, Mac, and iCloud.com are completely down for others.

Are you having any problems? Head down to the comments and let us know exactly which services seem to be working (or not)!

I like the part where iOS keeps on prompting you to input your iCloud password
